

Governor Douglas A. Ducey

Director Tim Roemer

Ryan Murray joined the Arizona Department of Homeland Security in July 2021 and currently serves as the Deputy Director for Arizona Cyber Command and as the Deputy Chief Information Security Officer for the State of Arizona. He also previously served as the Chief Information Security Officer for the Arizona Department of Revenue for three and a half years.

In his current role, Deputy Director Murray provides tactical and operational leadership for Cyber Command, and strategic advice to Director Roemer, the State CISO.

Prior to joining the State in 2018, Ryan held several public sector positions throughout Arizona which included Maricopa County and the Crane School District.

He has nearly 20 years experience in IT and Information Security, is a Certified Information Systems Security Professional (CISSP), Certified Cloud Security Professional (CCSP) and holds a Bachelors in Cyber Security and Information Assurance from Western Governors University.

In the coming Fiscal Year, Mr. Murray looks forward to accomplishing several key initiatives, including a significant expansion of the Department's Cyber Grant Program for local cities and counties, and increased collaboration for cyber information sharing across the State.
